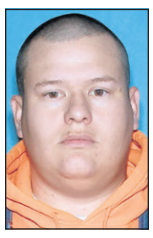
First defendant arraigned in biker shootout

Brewer held without bail

BY MARK CAMPBELL

The first of four alleged biker gang members charged with murder in connection with a fatal shootout in rural Jefferson County on June 22, was arraigned Friday in Jefferson Circuit Court and ordered held without bail until trial.



Jason W. Brewer

Jason W. Brewer, 35, of North Vernon, Indiana, has been charged with Murder, a Level 1 felony; Attempted Murder, Attempted Robbery and Attempted Burglary, all Level 2 felonies; and Obstruction of Justice, a Level 6 felony, plus a Criminal Gang Enhancement that could add years to his prison sentence if convicted.

Brewer, now lodged in the Jefferson County Jail, appeared before Circuit Judge D.J. Mote by video conference from the jail for the reading of his charges Friday. A not guilty plea was entered on his behalf and Mote ordered that a public defender be assigned to his case. Brewer's next scheduled court appearance is a pretrial conference on Sept. 15 and he is scheduled for a jury trial on Sept. 28.

According to an affidavit filed by the State of Indiana, Brewer was one of five biker gang members who went to an isolated property on North John Deere Road near Dupont shortly after 4 a.m. on June 22, armed with guns and knives, and looking for Shawn Rudis.

The suspects were allegedly upset that Rudis was displaying patches and had tattoos representing membership in the "Warlocks" and/or "Pagans" biker clubs but was not a gang member and possibly an undercover informant. After arriving at the property, the bikers exchanged gunfire with Rudis and one biker, Dustin B. Lindner, 35, of Georgetown, Kentucky, was struck with a bullet from a .223 rifle fired by Rudis and died at the scene.

Brewer and three other defendants — Michael J. Karnuth, 31, of North Vernon; and David K. Faulker, 52, and Gary W. Fletcher, 40, both of Ohio, have been charged with murder under an Indiana law that allows associates in the commission of a crime to be charged when anyone dies during the crime.

Local contractors, craftsmen, artists put their touch on Cotton Mill project

BY BOB DEMAREE

Working on the new Fairfield by Marriott Inn and Suites in downtown Madison has been more than just a typical job to get a building ready to open as a hotel.

It's a way to put a positive stamp on the future by salvaging and re-purposing something from the past and a lot of local craftsmen and artists have been involved in the project.

"The level of cooperation and excitement of this project beats anything I have ever done before," said Ron Bateman, owner representative of the development group behind the project.

He said it goes beyond contractors doing a job just to earn the money. Most of the contractors are local, as are their employees, bringing a sense of familiarity to the project.

"They're happy to work on this" and it has showed in the effort and craftsmanship that all of the contractors have put into their piece of the project.

The Eagle Cotton Mill, located at 108 St. Michaels Avenue, was built in 1884 for textile milling operations that lasted into the early 1930s. Meese Manufacturing Company took over the building in 1938 to make canvas containers before later transitioning into plastics. After Meese discontinued manufacturing at the site in the 1980s, several possibilities for re-using the site were considered but the building, listed in the National Register of Historic Places and designated a National Historic Landmark, sat empty and deteriorating for many years until Bateman's group put the Fairfield Inn project together.

"I've enjoyed being a part of the progress, and just seeing it" all come together," said Trent Wisner, president of ETC Systems Inc. of North Vernon, Indiana, an electrical contractor on the project. He said he is thrilled that his company has had the opportunity to be involved in saving a blighted property "from the 1800s and breathing life back into it."

"This is absolutely wonderful for Madison," said Mike Prickett, president of Glass Unlimited of Madison, which was contracted to provide glass throughout the inside of the building including all the mirrors, shower doors and a glass wall in an office area.

Commissioners revisit Second Amendment issue

BY BOB DEMAREE

Supporters of Second Amendment Sanctuary were back before the Jefferson County Commissioners Thursday asking them to take action to preserve the right to own firearms in Jefferson County even if federal and state laws would seek to limit gun ownership.

Richard Carter said he was asking the Commissioners "to pass a law guaranteeing Jefferson County, Indiana, will be a Sanctuary Second Amendment county, and no one in this county will assist the feds in enforcing unconstitutional firearms laws." Carter also sought adoption of an ordinance imposing "a heavy fine and jail time for anyone who breaks it."

The issue was previously brought up at a Feb. 6, 2020, meeting of the Commissioners when a petition with 1,730 signatures was submitted supporting Second Amendment Sanctuary. Commissioners President David Bramer said the board has been waiting until COVID-19 restrictions were more fully lifted to be able to seek more public input on the matter.

Bramer assured Carter that the board is considering ways to address the Sanctuary Second Amendment issue and said "we are now at the point now where we can, and start to schedule something."

Carter said his concerned is that the federal government could adopt gun control legislation and pass along the cost of doing that to the county.

"You should not be spending taxpayer money from this county enforcing federal laws," Carter said. "If they want their federal laws, let them spend federal money. Our taxes are high enough. They should be able to handle their own personnel."

County resident Sandy Palmer said she opposed an ordinance making Jefferson County a Sanctuary Second Amendment county.

"I don't think our guns are in danger of being taken. Assault weapons maybe, but I'm OK with that. There's not a deer out there that really needs to be attacked with an assault weapon," Palmer said.

Carter asked Palmer if she wanted her tax dollars used to enforce federal laws, and she said she was OK with that.

"I am not," Carter responded

County resident Jarrett Boyd added, "I want my tax dollars building federal highways and protecting the people in this country from people who carry assault weapons on the streets and murder students."

Bramer spoke for the need for civil discourse in the discussion, noting: "If we're going to start attacking people at meetings, then that civil discourse is not going to go anywhere."

"I'm sorry that people feel that having a Second Amendment Sanctuary City means you'll have people going up and down the street with AR-15s," Bramer said. " I'm just not sure you see that anywhere, but that's kind of the thing that gets thrown out."

Palmer noted she is not opposed to guns, but added "I think we already have laws protecting the Second Amendment and that this ordinance is needless because we just need to enforce the laws we've got. I don't think we're going to have people going up and down the streets with AR-15s."

Palmer also expressed concern about the ordinance that was submitted with the petition in 2020 in that it might prevent anyone from enforcing other laws. "If we didn't want gunshots in our neighborhood, you couldn't enforce them," she said.

Bramer admitted the initial ordinance had issues and said, "We wouldn't pass that. Would we consider something along the lines of talking about the Second Amendment in Jefferson County? Yes, we might. Would it be an ordinance? Probably not."

Bramer said the Commissioners "in our discussions with our attorney, we can't make a law." But he added that they definitely want to talk more with those who have proposed an ordinance.

Carter said the "law does not give you the right to own the gun; that's your God-given right. God gave you the right, not any law. You have the right to defend yourself and your family. That's why this country was started."

Later in the meeting, Sheriff Dave Thomas said he would contact Carter to discuss the issue with him. "We all know that the ordinance cannot supersede the Constitution of the United States. That's my two cents, and I'm a gun owner."

IN OTHER BUSINESS

- Bramer said groundwork has begun on the Jefferson County Sheriff and Justice Center, and noted a groundbreaking will likely take place later this month.
- Heard a request by Kelly Bridges, acting director of the Children's Advocacy Center of Southeastern Indiana (CACSEI), for $15,000 from the county's 2022 budget, an increase from $5,000 from the past. Children's Advocacy Center helps children in the healing process after allegations of child abuse, neglect or assault.

Bridges said the organization worked with 122 children in Jefferson County last year, and already has 106 cases through June. "It's looking like we're going to have more than double of last year," she said, adding that the increase isn't because of more abuse in Jefferson County, but because of the effectiveness of the work done by local law enforcement in helping to utilize the services.

- Heard a request from Susan Stahl, executive director of Girls Inc., for $5,000 from the county budget in 2022 towards that organization's after-school program.

"The work of empowering of girls and helping them to be more productive is more important now than ever," said Stahl noting that the work is challenging. "There are issues as a little girl that I thought would be gone by now and they're not," she said, noting that the issues have morphed so they may be slightly different, but "they're still the same. We have a lot of work to do."

- Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan updated relief efforts following the flash flooding that occurred in Jefferson County on June 18-19. He said the Indiana Department of Homeland Security came to do its validation of the local assessment on June 23.

"I'm going to brag a little bit. They threw nothing out," Morgan said. "They validated everything we submitted and concurred with the assessment."

He said there was nothing that the surveyor did not agree to, so "I have no reason to believe that some kind of assistance won't be forthcoming." Morgan said EMA "did an incredible amount of work in a short period of time," and he credited volunteers that are responsible for the success of what was accomplished.

Two of the four suspects — Brewer and Fletcher — are also charged with attempted murder because they, along with Lindner, exchanged gunfire with Rudis while he was holed up in a shed near the end of North John Deer Lane.

The four men are also charged with attempted robbery and attempted burglary — a police investigation indicated they intended to rob Rudis — and three of the men and a woman, 26-year-old Jordan M. Lowe, of North Vernon, are charged with obstruction of justice in connection with their alleged attempted cover-up of the crime by planning and disposing of weapons and vehicles used during the attack. The woman, who was not along on the raid, is charged with assisting a criminal and obstruction of justice for her role after the fact.

All five suspects are in custody and Jefferson County Prosecutor David Sutter said arraignments for Karnuth, Faulker, Fletcher and Lowe could take place as early as next week.

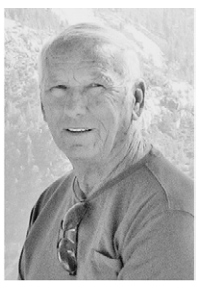
In Loving Memory Of
Kenneth A. Bowman



It has been five long years
since my world fell apart,
And even as I go on, every day breaks my heart.
No one knows the heartache I try to hide.
Only God knows how many times I've cried.
God saw that you were suffering,
And the hills were hard to climb.
So he closed your weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be thine."
When I look back upon our lives,
One of the things that makes me glad
Is that you chose me to share with you
The precious years we had.

Sister obsessed with conspiracy theories

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My sister and I reunited about five years ago after not speaking for at least 10 years. Unfortunately, we did not have a good childhood; as we got older, our own dynamics grew toxic, and I had no choice but to keep her away. I was glad that we started talking again earlier this year, but since we have reconnected, I have noticed some quirks. She believes in a lot of conspiracy theories and practices a religion that has some strange beliefs. She says very hateful things about certain groups of people. Sometimes, we will be enjoying ourselves at the mall or at lunch, and seemingly out of nowhere, she will start espousing some of her crazy or hateful beliefs. She has also done this around my children. Another thing is that she randomly gets incredibly frightened and calls me crying and begging me to buy supplies for her in case it's the end of the world, or to loan her money to leave the country because she believes the government is trying to kill her.

She gets all her information from videos she finds online. I have begged her to stop, and I try to be patient, but it's upsetting to me, and I stay stressed for days after one of her episodes. I don't want to lose my sister again, but our relationship is wearing me down. Can you help? — Sad About Sis

Dear Sad: The internet has flooded the world with conspiracy theories. Millions are lost in that sea, while the rest of us, their friends and family, stand waiting at the shore. In your sister's case, it sounds as though there might be a deeper issue at play. Her extreme paranoia suggests an underlying mental illness. While you can't force her to seek help, you can encourage her to do so.

First, empathize with her anxieties. The modern world can be an overwhelming, frightening place right now; history seems to be moving at an alarming clip. Technology does raise legitimate privacy concerns. You can understand where she's coming from without agreeing to where she's ended up.

Ask how she's doing. Let her know that you've been concerned lately, because her fears seem to be causing her a lot of distress — such as the times when she called you asking for money to flee the country. Encourage her to consider talking with a counselor.

Whether or not she agrees to get help, you can help yourself by setting better boundaries. Let her know you won't tolerate any hate speech; the second she starts that up, firmly excuse yourself. For relief from the burden of shouldering this weight alone, visit https://www.nami.org; select "Support and Education"; then "Support Groups." From there, you'll find the link for family support groups. Meetings are free, and the peace of mind they can offer is priceless.

Best friend turned cheating boyfriend

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My longtime best friend of 15 years and I entered into a romantic relationship in March of last year. It was a nightmare from almost the very beginning. There were faults and failures on both sides, but ultimately, it ended when it came to light that he had not only been cheating on me but also gotten the other girl pregnant!

The breakup has left me very confused and deeply hurt and traumatized. I miss my best friend more than anything. We've had no contact for more than a month now, but lately the urge to reach out to him has been overwhelming. What do I do? Is it better to leave things as they stand? Is reaching out a bad idea? — Missing My Best Friend

Dear MMBF: Wounds can get itchy when they're healing. That doesn't mean we should scratch them. The longing you feel to talk to your ex right now is an itch that shouldn't be scratched. Take time to mend and focus on your own mental health and personal development. Try new hobbies. Establish positive routines. When you feel yourself wanting to reach out to him, reach out to another friend instead. It won't be easy, but it will get a little bit easier every day.

Dear Annie: The world is full of self-righteous people. I have a few strategies to avoid becoming one, which I thought you might share with your readers.

First, I have learned that being empathetic — always trying to understand where the other person is coming from — and a good listener goes a long way, not just in conflicts but in everyday life. When a friend is venting about a problem, don't interrupt. Take a deep breath. Just listening will be much more helpful to them than armchair diagnoses.

Second, I forgive myself and others in my life every day. I will myself to do so even when I don't feel like it.

And lastly, I have a sign on my desk that I look at before I call anyone about anything. It says, in big bold type, "NO 'YOU' STATEMENTS." I invite all to do the same. — Big T.

Dear Big T.: I think your sign ought to come pre-installed on desks. Thanks for the thoughtful tips.

Dear Annie: Your response to "Wrongfully Accused," the man in the long-distance relationship with a woman who wrongly accuses him of infidelity, misses another possibility. She may have a paranoid delusional disorder known as Othello syndrome. Those diagnosed with it are unable to distinguish between reality and their delusions that a spouse or partner is being unfaithful. My wife of 35 years is continually tormented by these thoughts, and it causes great stress in our marriage. But I would never leave her. — Faithful Husband

Dear Faithful Husband: Until receiving your letter, I had never heard of Othello syndrome, which is "a psychotic disorder characterized by delusion of infidelity or jealousy," as noted in the Journal of Psychiatry and Clinical Neurosciences in 2012. Although it's a rare condition, it's a possibility worth considering, for sure. Thank you for writing.

Bateman had hoped the boutique hotel would be ready to open for the 2021 Kentucky Derby, then this weekend's Madison Regatta & Roostertail Music Festival but delays during the COVID-19 cost the group both dates and now the plans are for a soft opening on July 15 with a ribbon cutting ceremony in September on the $22 million project.

Last week tradesmen were diligently engaged in projects throughout the building and it was easy to see how far the project has come and how far it still has to go.

Brody Peterson, a network support specialist for Decisive Solutions of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, was there connecting 97 televisions in the 85 guest rooms and other common spaces like the fitness room, breakfast bar area and lobby. "This is beautiful. It has a really cool look," Peterson said.

Enviroscape of Madison is doing the landscaping on the project and company President John Bruns said the project has been a pleasure to work on and "kind of refreshing." He said the design and work has been a cooperative effort between Ratio Architects and Enviroscape involving not just landscaping, but also hardscaping, such as the brick work in the front of the building and a stone wall in the back.

Sedam Contracting, of Hanover, has been doing the excavation and groundwork around the building, along with water, sewer and storm drainage systems and sidewalks, asphalt and paving. Company President Rod Kiefer noted Sedam's role is twofold including a contract with the City of Madison to construct sidewalks and the curbs along Vaughn Drive and St. Michael's Avenue and another with the developers for all the work on-site.

GranBrazil Stone and Quartz is providing all the counter tops in the hotel from the front desk to the breakfast bar and in all guest rooms.

"It was a big project," Daryl Detmer, president of GranBrazil, said noting the hotel has "beautiful rooms."

Bob Demaree

Julio Rios attaches boards to main entrance at the front of the building.

There is a strong sense of Madison throughout the building and that goes beyond the work of the contractors and their craftsmen. Almost every room includes a print of a Madison scene from a painting by local artist Eric Phagan.

Behind the front desk is an original painting by Phagan depicting steamboats on the Ohio River with the old Cotton Mill in the background. There are also historic photos of the interior of the Cotton Mill from years ago showing the industrial history of the structure as well as other historic buildings in Madison. Bateman said he worked with John Nyberg and Camille Fife of the Jefferson County Historical Society to obtain the historical photos that were then enlarged to be showcased on the first floor of the hotel. Additionally, the breakfast dining area has present-day photos by local photographer Bernie Kasper.

Bateman said one of the most challenging aspects of the project has been meshing the building's historic past with the modern needs of a hotel and its guests.

"It's not quite as complicated as a hospital, but almost as complicated as a hospital," Bateman said, noting converting the building into apartments would have been much easier than a hotel.

Bateman said hotels require key card systems, customer technology and Internet solutions — especially to meet operational standards of Marriott. However, what provided a challenge in terms of integrating technology was a blessing in terms of space utilization. Converting a huge space designed for manufacturing into smaller units aimed at personal comfort was made easy by the wide open floor plan.

Bob Demaree

Developer Ron Bateman makes a walkthrough of one of the rooms facing the Ohio River at the Fairfield by Marriott Inn & Suites that is being developed in the former Eagle Cotton Mill in downtown Madison. The huge windows of the former textile factory provide a spectacular view of the river and downtown Madison.

The 104,000 square-foot building is four stories tall and each interior floor was designed as a single open space. The expansive open floor plan allowed mill owners to fit in massive machinery used during the cotton milling process. However, Bateman noted that openness of each floor made the building "ideal for a hotel" because it allowed architect to design space consistently for guest rooms. In addition to the front desk, lobby, breakfast area and offices, the first floor will also include a meeting room or banquet hall capable of seating up 300 people.

Along with the vintage brickwork, one of the most eye-catching features of the building is the one hundred 8-foot tall windows — 25 on each story — that wrap the building. In the building's previous life the windows allowed Cotton Mill workers to make the most of natural light. Now the tall windows provide each guest room a wonderful view of the Ohio River on the south side and views of the Madison historic district from the north side.

The property also includes two buildings that have been outwardly restored, but initially will not be functional. At the front of the hotel is a former office building that Bateman said has had its roof restored with tile re-purposed from another Madison historic site.

He said the tile was at one time on 704 West Second Street, which historically is called the Robert McKim House named after a wealthy Madison philanthropist of the 1800s.

In the rear of the hotel is a picker-house, where cotton would be processed before going into the actual mill. "We wanted to have the outside done so they look finished when we open," Bateman said. He noted that once the hotel opens, they can then better consider how the two buildings might be used.

ERJO Construction, a Switzerland County company known for historical restoration, has been involved in the Cotton Mill project since November of 2019. Owner Hershel Brichto had photos showing the deterioration at the picker-house before its renovation. The roof was caved-in and Bateman said turkey buzzards by the hundreds would sit on the building.

"An optimist is the only one that would be dumb enough to take on something like this," Brichto joked, adding that Bateman's optimism has resurrected a great building, and made it more beautiful than ever.

Both Brichto and Bateman noted that in spite of the building's poor condition in late 2019, it was still structurally sound.

"They developed this building with less tools than we have today, and they did it really well," said Brichto.

Wisner noted the building had 36-inch walls, which made it challenging to install electrical systems. All Fire Solutions installed the fire and sprinkler system, and company representative Jason Collins noted the "thicker walls ... takes more effort to get through" with drills but it's all been worth it. "This is a nice project."

Bateman said he loves that the project is breathing life back into the old Eagle Cotton Mill, but hopes it goes even beyond that. He said with all Fairfield Inn and Suites by Marriott has to offer as a hotel and conference center, he hopes it "contributes to the life of the community."

Certificates Of Deposit Strategies

"Bank Certificates of Deposits can be customized to fit most situations, but the devil is in the details!" Stephen Dybwad

Layin' It on the Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

Professional investors employ various strategies for CD investments to reduce the risk and exposure to loss further and improve liquidity. Consider your priorities and consult with a professional to determine the appropriate strategy for your unique situation.

Diversification: As with any investment strategy, diversification is key to protecting your assets from the risk of loss. Working with the different types of CDs that are available is yet another aspect of this strategy.

Market Linked CDs, tied to market indices, are an essential component of a CD diversification strategy. This provides you with different asset classes – international currencies, global investments, commodities, and stocks and bonds – that will cover more bases of risk protection from unpredicted changes in the economic landscape.

Studies on diversification show that investors who split investments into two or more different asset classes will receive the best possible total returns on average compared to those exclusively placed in a single asset class. The longer the term of investment, the more consistent these results become. Working with Market Linked CDs is one of the only methods of blending FDIC insurance of principal with the diversification options available to investors in commodities, stocks, bonds, treasury bills, and international markets.

Laddering: The problem with many longer-term Certificates of Deposit is the missed opportunity of locking in higher rates that may come available. At the same time, an investor waits for their investment term to occur, and liquidity can also be a problem. In addition, during periods where inflation is also rising, the risk of losing buying power increases.

The Laddering Strategy mitigates these issues by separating the total investment into multiple CDs with varying terms of maturity. For example, an investor with $50,000 may put $10,000 each into a one-year, two-year, three-year, four-year, and five-year series of CDs. When the one-year CD matures, it is rolled into a five-year CD. This allows the investor to lock into a different type of CD investment or higher interest rates depending on how the economic climate changes from year to year.

With low interest rates holding steady in recent years, laddering does not currently provide opportunities for locking in increasing interest rates but will still provide investors with liquidity.

Barbell Strategy: The Barbell Strategy emphasizes short and long-term investments; for example, an investor may place a $50,000 investment of $25,000 each in 1 year and 5-year CDs. This may allow for better response to uncertain conditions that may arise in the coming years and maintain a higher level of liquidity than a standard laddering strategy.

Your CD maturity date is the date that your bank guarantees a full return of principal.

Liquidity is the investor's ability to access the funds even if subject to a penalty or market value adjustment. Investors who prize liquidity highly are concerned they will need money they have committed to a long-term investment before it matures.

Still, not all investments impose early withdrawal fees, so investors need to be aware of the penalties specific to the products they are considering.

Market-linked CDs are an example of the variables involved. While they may hold the CD to maturity, these instruments may be sold back to the issuing bank on a secondary market before maturity at a publicly displayed current market value.

Government bonds can behave in much the same manner, so both options are more liquid than other options that may have the same maturity date.

Investors receive higher interest rates for longer time commitments but breaking that time commitment can often come with fees or penalties that eat into earnings and possibly even investment principal. Therefore, investors need to know penalties and fees that may come due well before selecting a product.

Market Linked Certificates of Deposit and other brokered CDs require a custodial account, and fees may be incurred for that account.

Investors should also be aware that the Financial Professional they are working with includes Certificates of Deposit in their "assets under management" account. A fee (i.e., 1%) is charged on all assets under the account. CDs are passive and do not require management. Therefore, they should not be included in such accounts.

Non-FDIC insured products may also have surrender fees, so investors must know fees and penalties for all investment products they are considering.

Miss Madison's Hughes honored for lifetime of support

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

More than any driver, crew chief or sponsor, Bob Hughes is responsible for Miss Madison Racing's vast success over the past 60 years and on Thursday night, the Madison Regatta and the City of Madison took the opportunity to honor the patriarch of the community-owned team.

The Madison Regatta celebrated the 70th anniversary of its first Indiana Governor's Cup race, the 60th anniversary of the Miss Madison Racing Team's founding and the 50th anniversary of the 1971 APBA Gold Cup win with a Gala at the Livery Stable in downtown Madison.

Regatta historian and former president Dave Taylor regaled the audience with the history of both the Regatta and the Miss Madison, all living past presidents of the Madison Regatta were presented medals from the city, while Tony Steinhardt, the last living member of the 1971 Miss Madison Gold Cup winning team, talked about the boat's iconic win.

But the highlight of the night was the celebration of Hughes, who joined the Miss Madison organization in 1969, took over as president in 1972 and ran the team until just a few years ago when failing health forced him into retirement.

"In 60 years, there is one man in this building who has meant more to Miss Madison than anybody else," said Jeff Ayler, serving as MC for the event. "Bob Hughes is Miss Madison."

The 87-year-old Hughes doesn't get around as well as he used to and his once booming voice was reduced to a gravely whisper, but the old wit was still there.

"I'm sorry, my voice is gone," Hughes told the crowd with a smile. "I need some scotch I think. Scotch usually helps."

Hughes was presented an award from Madison Mayor Bob Courtney and Regatta Past Presidents John Knoebel and Nate Davis. Standing in front of the crowd with his wife Pat by his side, Hughes thanked everybody for the honor.

"Thanks for everything. I have really enjoyed it and I'm looking for a few more years yet," Hughes said. "I have a lot of respect for all of the folks in Madison and the Miss Madison team, and of course all of you here today. It's been quite the tradition."

"Miss Madison Racing has gone from an also-ran to, without question, the leader in the industry and that is thanks to Bob and the fans," said Charlie Grooms, the current president of Miss Madison Racing. "We thank you for your support, we thank the fans, the team members and the sponsors. And Bob, thank you, thank you."

In addition to honoring Hughes, current Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison driver Jimmy Shane also had a chance to speak and talked about his tenure with the team, now in its eighth year.

"I think one of the most proud things for me was that I was born and raised in a small town in Maryland. We had maybe 7,000 people in our town. And to experience and do what I have been able to do and be a part of this wonderful small town in Indiana, is an honor. It's an honor to be your driver," Shane said. "I represent you as a community and the sponsors and the race team that has so much tradition over the years. I'm excited to get out there this weekend and race for another Gold Cup win."

WEEKEND UPDATE

As of 11 a.m. Friday afternoon, the Ohio River stood at 22.4 feet as measured by Markland Dam and was expected to crest late Friday night at 26 feet before dropping rapidly to about 18 feet by Sunday morning.

The rapid drop should allow for racing this weekend although the schedule may be adjusted to compensate for changing water conditions.

Villwock ready to roll in first return to Madison since 2012

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

It wasn't exactly the type of weekend that Dave Villwock envisioned for his return to a sport that he has dominated in the past, but for anybody who knows the veteran Unlimited hydroplane driver, it would be foolish to count him out.

Villwock returned to the cockpit for the first time in seven years last weekend in Guntersville, Alabama, and steered the U-40 Miss Beacon Plumbing to a third-place finish in the Lake Guntersville Hydrofest.

The third place was a nice finish to what was a disappointing weekend overall for the Beacon Plumbing team. Mechanical woes kept the boat on the docks for all three preliminary heats and they only made it into the final heat due to a lack of running boats in the pits. A disqualification by Andrew Tate and the U-12 Graham Trucking moved Villwock onto the front row for the start and a pair of penalties to two other boats pushed him into a third place finish overall.

"It's fun to be back. I enjoyed myself and I had a great time," said Villwock. "It was fun to go racing again."

Bucket List Racing owners Kelly and Sharon Stocklin have campaigned a smaller boat on the H1 Unlimited Series for the past eight years but made the jump to a regulation-sized boat last year when they purchased a hull from the U-21 Go Fast Turn Left Racing Team.

Villwock, who has been business partners and friends with Kelly Stocklin for several decades, was brought aboard to help the team make the conversion. As good as Villwock is as a driver — his 67 career wins are the most ever — he may be even better in the pits, winning a National High Points Championship as crew chief of the Miss Circus Circus in 1990 and worked his magic on other championship teams he drove for like the Pico American Dream and Miss Budweiser.

With Villwock calling the shots, the Bucket List team got the boat ready over the offseason. When Beacon Plumbing came on board as sponsor, it was decided that Villwock should climb back into the cockpit.

NCAA allows for athlete compensation as state laws loom

BY SCHUYLER DIXON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — The NCAA Board of Directors approved one of the biggest changes in the history of college athletics Wednesday, clearing the way for nearly a half-million athletes to start earning money based on their fame and celebrity without fear of endangering their eligibility or putting their school in jeopardy of violating amateurism rules that have stood for decades.

The decision, expected for months as state after state passed laws intended to render NCAA rules moot on the topic, came on the eve of the market opening Thursday for athletes in a dozen states, including giants like Texas and Florida.

"This is an important day for college athletes since they all are now able to take advantage of name, image and likeness opportunities," NCAA President Mark Emmert said.

The move effectively suspends NCAA restrictions on payments to athletes for things such as sponsorship deals, online endorsements and personal appearances. it applies to all three divisions or some 460,000 athletes.

The NCAA will also allow athletes to enter into agreements with agents, though all athletes are expected to keep their school informed of any and all NIL arrangements. The NCAA said schools are responsible "for determining whether those activities are consistent with state law."

Anticipating the change, many schools already have plans in place, with some weaving NIL education into for-credit coursework.

Within hours after the NCAA announcement, a handful announced policies or updated plans on the topic, including Pitt and Indiana, which said Hoosier athletes "can be contacted directly in a variety of ways to arrange or discuss potential NIL agreements." Stanford said much of its "NIL support" would be available for all students, not just Cardinal athletes.

Compliance officers at the NCAA's more than 1,100 schools will be busy.

Athletes must report NIL arrangements to their schools and there are limits on what they can do. Florida and Texas, for example, bar athletes from endorsing gambling and many schools have specific guidance about using — or not using — their logos or uniforms during NIL work. Kentucky warned its athletes that NIL compensation could affect need-based financial aid.

NCAA rules go back to its founding in 1906, though enforcement of infractions didn't pick up steam until the 1950s. The idea of money flowing to athletes has generally been opposed by the organization with exceptions and opposition both growing in recent years as athletes and former athletes have started to win in court.

Kentucky guard Mintz to return for final season

BY THE COURIER STAFF

LEXINGTON — Guard Davion Mintz will withdraw from the NBA draft and return to Kentucky for his final season after leading the Wildcats in scoring as a graduate transfer.

Mintz entered the draft in May and said in a release Thursday that he felt "ready and closer" to his goal of playing in the NBA after going through the evaluation process. But, he added, "My heart has guided me back to Kentucky for one more year" to prove he's ready for the highest level. The 6-foot-3 Mintz will use the extra season of eligibility available because of COVID-19. Mintz transferred from Creighton last year and averaged 11.5 points per game. He also led Kentucky with 56 3-pointers and 77 assists. He is the Wildcats' first leading scorer to return to school since Randolph Morris (2006-07) and joins an experienced roster that has added transfers CJ Fredrick (Iowa), Kellan Grady (Davidson) and Sahvir Wheeler (Georgia) to the backcourt.

Farmer, Stephenson rally Reds past Padres, 5-4, in 9th

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Kyle Farmer hit a tying homer in the bottom of the ninth inning and Tyler Stephenson drove in the winning run with a two-out single to rally the Cincinnati Reds past the San Diego Padres 5-4 on Thursday night.

Farmer smashed a shot to center field with one out against closer Mark Melancon (1-1), who then loaded the bases before Stephenson lined a 1-0 pitch down the right-field line.

"It was a cutter," said Stephenson, the Reds' rookie catcher. "A simple swing, right field. My favorite one so far."

Cincinnati salvaged the rain-delayed series finale and finally stopped the Padres, who had beaten the Reds six times in the past two weeks while winning 11 of 12 games overall.

Manny Machado gave San Diego a 4-3 lead when he scored from second on a throwing error by rookie third baseman Alejo Lopez in the eighth inning.

Padres reliever Drew Pomeranz put two runners on in the Reds half of the eighth but got Joey Votto to fly out and Lopez to ground into an inning-ending double play.

Pinch-hitter Tommy Pham drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the Padres seventh to tie the score and chase Cincinnati starter Luis Castillo, who allowed three runs and five hits with six strikeouts in 6 1/3 innings.

Art Warren (1-0) pitched a scoreless ninth for the Reds.

Castillo pushed across the first Reds run in the second on a bases-loaded fielder's choice, and Jonathan India doubled home another.

Aristedes Aquino had a run-scoring double in the Reds fifth.

SEEING STARS

A 52-minute rain delay in the fifth inning gave Bell the chance to announce to the Reds that right fielder Nick Castellanos and left fielder Jesse Winker were voted starters for the All-Star Game on July 13 at Coors Field in Denver. It will be the first All-Star appearance for both, as well as for Padres star Fernando Tatis Jr., who was voted the starting shortstop for the NL squad.

Tingler said Tatis also got the exciting news during the rain delay.

The last time two Reds outfielders started in an All-Star Game was 1956 when Gus Bell — grandfather of the Reds' manager — and Frank Robinson got the call for the NL.

Winker wept while talking to reporters about his selection.

"You know what, man? I never thought this could happen for me," he said. "I'm very thankful."

PADRES 7, REDS 5 (WEDNESDAY)

Trent Grisham hit a grand slam and a solo shot and the San Diego Padres rallied for their 11th win in the last 12 games, beating the Cincinnati Reds 7-5 on Wednesday night in a game called in the sixth inning due to rain.

Grisham's first career grand slam in the fifth inning came off reliever Josh Osich and gave San Diego the lead and its sixth straight win over Cincinnati in the past two weeks.

The game was stopped with one out in the Padres' half of the sixth amid a thunderstorm.

It was declared official after the 93-minute weather delay.

Grisham and Wil Myers hit back-to-back solos shots in the Padres' second. Fernando Tatis Jr. hit his National League-leading 26th homer leading off the third.

Nick Castellanos hit a three-run homer as part of the Reds' four-run first inning.

Joey Votto homered to right leading off the third inning — the 1,000 RBI of his career — but the Reds bullpen, the worst in the majors, promptly blew the 5-3 lead.

Osich relieved Reds starter Vladimir Gutierrez (3-3) with one out and the bases full in the fifth inning.

GOOD COMPANY

Votto's homer put him among legends Johnny Bench (1,376), Tony Perez (1,192), Pete Rose (1,036) and Frank Robinson (1,009) as the the only Reds players in modern history with 1,000 RBIs.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Reds: RHP Michael Lorenzen was sent to the Arizona complex for a rehab assignment. Out all season with a shoulder strain, he could be back some time after the All Star break. ... CF Tyler Naquin missed a third game with a sore right wrist. Manager David Bell said he's expected to be back Thursday. ... Richardson will miss Olympic 100 after marijuana test

BY EDDIE PELLS AND PAT GRAHAM
AP SPORTS WRITERS

American champion Sha'Carri Richardson cannot run in the Olympic 100-meter race after testing positive for a chemical found in marijuana.

Richardson, who won the 100 at Olympic trials in 10.86 seconds on June 19, told of her ban Friday on the "Today Show." She tested positive at the Olympic trials and so her result is erased. Fourth-place finisher Jenna Prandini is expected to get Richardson's spot in the 100.

Richardson accepted a 30-day suspension that ends July 27, which would be in time to run in the women's relays. USA Track and Field has not disclosed plans for the relay.

The 21-year-old sprinter was expected to face Jamaica's Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce in one of the most highly anticipated races of the Olympic track meet.

On Thursday, as reports swirled about her possible marijuana use, Richardson put out a tweet that said, simply: "I am human." On Friday, she went on TV and said she smoked marijuana as a way of coping with her mother's recent death.

"I was definitely triggered and blinded by emotions, blinded by badness, and hurting, and hiding hurt," she said on "Today." "I know I can't hide myself, so in some type of way, I was trying to hide my pain."

Richardson had what could have been a three-month sanction reduced to one month because she participated in a counseling program.

After the London Olympics, international regulators relaxed the threshold for what constitutes a positive test for marijuana from 15 nanograms per milliliter to 150 ng/m. They explained the new threshold was an attempt to ensure that in-competition use is detected and not use during the days and weeks before competition.

Though there have been wide-ranging debates about whether marijuana should be considered a performance-enhancing drug, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency makes clear on its website that "all synthetic and naturally occurring cannabinoids are prohibited in-competition, except for cannabidiol (CBD)," a byproduct that is being explored for possible medical benefits.

While not weighing in on her prospects for the relays, USATF put out a statement that said her "situation is incredibly unfortunate and devastating for everyone involved."

With title, Lemonis makes good on Mangum's CWS prediction

BY ERIC OLSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

OMAHA, Neb. — It was minutes after Mississippi State was eliminated from the 2019 College World Series when Jake Mangum turned to first-year coach Chris Lemonis at the post-game news conference and made a prediction.

"You're going to bring the first national championship to this baseball program," Mangum said. "You are. And it's going to be awesome. I can't wait to see it."

Mangum didn't get to see it in real time — he was playing center field and batting leadoff for the Double-A Binghamton Rumble Ponies in Richmond, Virginia, on Wednesday night — but his words proved prophetic. The Bulldogs (50-18) won their school's first national championship in a team sport, and Lemonis and his charges took it back to Starkville in his second full season as head coach. The 2020 season ended after 16 games because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

"The @RumblePoniesBB just won a ball game! What did me and @Colegordon12 miss???" Mangum tweeted with smiley face emojis and a reference to MSU and current teammate Cole Gordon.

Mangum, the SEC all-time hits leader, followed with this: "Mississippi State University. National Champions."

The Bulldogs were reeling in 2018 when Andy Cannizaro was forced out three games into his second season for what he called "poor decisions." Assistant Gary Henderson took over, and the Bulldogs went on a surprise postseason run that ended with what would be the first of three straight appearances at the CWS. Lemonis was hired the next month after leading Indiana to the NCAA Tournament in three of his four years. He bonded quickly with his new players and has created a laid-back yet competitive atmosphere.

"Coach Lem is unbelievable," SEC player of the year Tanner Allen said. "He's a player's coach. I tell people all the time, that guy is somebody you want to play for. He knows when to be serious and he knows when to be loose. To be honest with you, when we're loose and he's loose, it just clicks."

Like Mangum, who twice turned down chances to go pro to pursue a national title, Allen and fellow outfielder Rowdey Jordan decided together to come back for one more run.

"I didn't want to do it with anybody else, let's put it like that," Allen said. "I didn't just come back to make the playoffs or make a super regional, I wanted to come back to win a national championship. I believed it and we all believed it."

The Bulldogs, like all championship teams, played their best at the end. They were, after all, swept by Arkansas and lost a series to Missouri, both at home, then went two-and-out at the Southeastern Conference Tournament. They rallied by sweeping through their regional and took a three-game super regional against Notre Dame before winning three one-run games to reach the CWS finals. They bounced back from a devastating first inning in an 8-2 loss to Vanderbilt in the opener of the finals, dominating the Commodores with wins of 13-2 and 9-0 in Games 2 and 3.

Will Bednar, who likely will be a first-round pick in the Major League Baseball draft this month, was the CWS Most Outstanding Player after striking out 15 in his Omaha debut against Texas and pitched six no-hit innings in a combined one-hitter with Landon Sims on Wednesday evening.

"Shout out to Kelly and Sharon. They jumped off into the Unlimited abyss and I managed to jump with them," Villwock said with a smile. "Along with a great friend and partner, Bill Cahill of Beacon Plumbing. Thanks to him or we wouldn't be here."

Villwock had not driven an Unlimited hydroplane since 2014 but he quickly made up for lost time. He completed all of his driver's qualification laps during the test session at the Tri-Cities last month and posted the third-fastest qualifying speed at Guntersville last weekend.

But problems arose once actual racing began. A broken air regulator in the cockpit forced the team out of the first heat and a gearbox issue wiped out the second heat. In the third heat, the ignitor failed and the boat wouldn't start.

During a normal race, Villwock's weekend would have ended there but with only seven boats in the pits and Villwock's teammate Dustin Echols forced to withdraw after the U-440 Bucket List Racing broke a gearbox, Villwock had a chance.

"They were just giving me a little time off so that I could rest before the final," joked the 67-year-old 10-time national champion. "There were some things that were unforeseen that normally don't happen and it really put us in a testing mode and we struggled through that. But we put something in it to give us a chance in the final and the team did a great job."

Villwock hasn't competed in Madison since 2012, when he won the race aboard the Spirit of Qatar, the last of his record ninth Indiana Governor's Cups. He has also won 10 APBA Gold Cups — one shy of Chip Hanauer's record 11 — and while he is an underdog this weekend, Villwock believes that he is a threat to claim victory.

"A lot of good things happen to us, too. We got some engines to run really well and our propeller program is going well. The boat ride is really good," Villwock said. "They're just showing a little bit of what we've got. Next week, we're going to be really tough."

NCAA

The NCAA's historic model of amateurism is changing.

The NCAA had hoped to have broader NIL rules in place months ago, but that process bogged down, as did efforts on Capitol Hill to have Congress pass a law addressing the issue. Emmert said the NCAA will continue to push for a federal law to "provide clarity on a national level."

The NCAA was forced to seek a temporary solution rather than have athletes in some states eligible for compensation while others were not. More than 10 states have laws set to go into effect Thursday that would have undercut or simply declared inert existing NCAA rules regarding NIL earnings.

Without NCAA action, athletes in some states could be making money without putting their college eligibility in jeopardy while their counterparts in other states could be in danger of breaking NCAA rules.

The NCAA's stopgap measure comes less than two weeks after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled against the association in a case involving education-related benefits. That 9-0 ruling is expected to impact issues related to compensation for athletes.

"The current environment — both legal and legislative — prevents us from providing a more permanent solution and the level of detail student-athletes deserve," Emmert said.

In a letter to member schools last week, Emmert stressed the high court still puts authority to govern college sports in the hands of the association. However, he warned schools that "existing and new rules are subject to antitrust analysis and we should expect continued litigation."
